

4D | Workplace - celebrating difference, discovering the creative edge

Auckland - Thursday 3 June, 2010

Time: 1:30pm to 5:30pm

Venue: Rydges Hotel Cnr Federal & Kingston Streets Auckland NZ

Cost: $195 incl GST per person

Workshop description:

This interactive and practical workshop supports employer development and also focuses on recruitment and staff retention. At least 10% of any given workforce will be dyslexic to some degree and individuals will typically think faster than they read, write and get their ideas down on paper – at all levels of employment, from graduates to ground workers.

Practical solutions will be presented to demonstrate exactly how to make bulletins and documents more accessible, and will include essential advice on writing effective reports through to preparing for internal, national and/or professional examinations and assessments. The workshop will provide information on how you can help employees manifest their potential and add value to your business.

Experiences taken from the UK with employers as diverse as the Armed Forces, a multinational civil engineering firm and a Metropolitan Police Force will be used to identify opportunities for you and your workplace.

Promoting a notice and adjust philosophy, the focus is on creating a new business reality in which dyslexic employees are recognised, respected and empowered to achieve their potential. This workshop also has the potential to maximise the contribution of all employees whose abilities and skills are acknowledged but whose literacy needs are holding them back.

Those that should attend:

Employers, business owners and employees that want to work with their employers in becoming more dyslexia aware.

Go to www.4d.org.nz/workshops now to secure your place.

The new
thinking paradigm

Workshop